not be longer concealed. A search of her baggage and clothes shows that she had carefully destroyed everything that might lead to her identity. Even the name bands on skirts and the shoes have been removed. She is said to be reined, wore good clothes, and is well educated. Since reaching the hotel she has addressed lotters to persons in Somerville and Boston, Mass.; Grand Central Station, New York, and to Baltimore. An empty laudanum bottle found in her room bore the name Willow Pharmacy, Somerville, Mass.

Hospital, with a pistol-shot wound in her temple, and suffering in addition from an overdose of laudanum, a young woman, who registered at the Princess Anne Cottage, Virginia Beach, as Ruth Morton, is to-night an unsolved mystery for the police and hospital authorities of the city.

Regaining consciousness at intervals, she refuses to disclose who she is, or her home town, declaring that she has written to friends notifying them that she came here to kill berself, and declares that further than this it is nebody's business. She begged the attending physicians to let her die.

She arrived on Monday, giving her name as Miss Morton, of Chicago, Wednesday night she took an overdose of laudanum, but was brought around and the matter hushed up. Early this morning she shot herself in the temple, and the attempt at suicide could
